

- structured in three regions (electron gun, interaction chamber, analyzer-detector) which are differentially vacuum-pumped
- each region has its own magnetic field
- after scattering, electrons are axially confined by  $B$
- backscattered electrons are reflected at the entrance and detected after a second passage through the chamber